The C2 Leadership Institute is designed to cultivate emerging leaders who are interested in civic engagement, public-private partnerships, and being a social justice advocate for the community while strengthening church and community partnerships. Past C2 Leadership Institute fellows have included high school and college students, community leaders, and church leaders. These emerging leaders are passionate about developing partnerships at the intersection of church and community.

Why C2?
According to a recent article from CNN, “almost every major branch of Christianity in the United States has lost a significant number of members...Pew found, mainly because millennials are leaving the fold.” Although churches are aware of this growing trend, they often misunderstand the cause of the problem. They conclude millennials are a very different generation who do not hold the same faith as their predecessors. The truth is young adults today have great passion and desire to see many churches are ill-equipped to facilitate such a change. Young adults today have great passion and desire to see God’s will on earth. So I looked into a variety of options: Los Angeles City Hall, Glendale City Hall, Pasadena City Hall, La Cañada City Hall, and Hall, to check if I really wanted to take this on my summer break.

Hall, I realized that the end of junior year marked the end of my AP courses, ran two marathons, managed 4 school clubs, and became an Eagle Scout (just to name a few). So after that was all said and done, I realized that I had nothing to do during my summer break. At first I planned to make some money by working at Trader Joe’s. But another desire was to be an intern at a civil/public service organization, to check if I really wanted to take this path. So I looked into a variety of options: Los Angeles City Hall, Glendale City Hall, Pasadena City Hall, La Cañada City Hall and Councilman David Ryu’s office. But reflecting upon my decision now, I would have picked no other place than Faith & Community Empowerment if I had the chance to choose again.

"I’m so grateful to have been a part of the C2 Leadership Institute. It was truly a unique and priceless experience, where I gained skills in a way so well integrated that I don’t think I can ever find it anywhere else. Ms. Im has been such an amazing mentor and role model for me, as a young Asian woman leader. She truly pushed me to be the best I could be. Even as a student who attends Berkeley, this was an experience that I wouldn’t trade for anything else. Best of all, I’ve learned to become a more confident me. As an Asian woman, I have often felt dismissed or expected to be quiet or submissive. But Ms. Im dares you to be bold, be loud, and to shine your light because how else can people see the good you can bring into this world? I’m excited to enter my final year at UC Berkeley with all the countless memories and newly acquired skill to become a part of the next generation of leaders.”

I didn’t know what I was getting myself into. My professor told me to do the C2 Leadership Institute. I wanted to get a job but I decided that this is the right thing to do for the summer. I was a full time intern at FACE. I got to do various programing and administrative work and learn computer skills. I went to different events and workshops. They covered so many various topics. I met people in different areas elected officials, business, community, civic, faith, and social justice. I got to network and build relationships. I was placed in the fast track and really got to stretch myself during the whole internship and fellowship. I was fortunate to be in a environment that put faith and community and lift the voices of all colors. I learned that building and nurturing the relationships is important. Ms. I taught me how to be a leader and helped me to fulfill my future ministry.
